The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

These last couple of weeks for the kids Sunday school, we have watched parts of the movie Selma. We started it because we were going to a MLK celebration last weekend and I wanted to give them some context.

What's amazing to me are the questions that these kids will ask, the things that they will notice. We watched scenes of King preaching and scenes of the groups marching and even kneeling in prayer. And I showed them these scenes because I really wanted to emphasize that MLK was also a minister.

The word that we gravitated to in his preaching was the word "we". As much as one man gets lifted up as the changemaker, he was by no means alone. And as much as King was standing up for the rights of African-Americans, he was standing up for the rights of all of God's creation. King wanted to free the oppressor as well as the oppressed, lifting the burden of hate from the culture they were surrounded in.

And he did that because that was his call as a minister.

When you teach things like this to children, you have to be clear. The questions they asked were about the actions they saw, the mentality is being presented. They wondered why anybody would be kept from voting or any other activity because of the color of their skin. "Isn't that racist?" Yes, without hesitation, without qualification, treating people as lesser than for the color of their skin is racist.

And we have the chance to do something better.

I wish the clarity that I had to present this lesson with was as easy for adults as it is for children. It's hard to speak for justice when we have lived so much of our lives making excuses for injustice. Even this weekend, a national discussion about justice played out before us and somehow it was difficult to talk about. But, what we need to be able to do is call out injustice where it is present. We need to work for justice. We need to speak up and act for the humanity of all. As clearly as I can say it, that is the work that was started by the Rev Dr. Martin Luther King Jr, and is work that we can continue.

WEEK OF COMPASSION OFFERING

This offering will be taken Sundays Feb. 17th and 24th.

Can you imagine?

We sometimes think that "imagination" means something escapist or illusory. Yet, imagination, is not something unreal or fake. No, it is essential to God's hope for creation. And God imagines a world where all are safe, all are loved, all are fed.

Can you imagine these things?

Through your gifts to Week of Compassion what we can imagine becomes ever more a reality for more and more people.
